show dress, the one Jack most liked of all her wardrobe, was no doubt in the hands of the chap whose shirts and collars were so utterly useless to her.

And being sensible as well as beautiful Patricia immediately came to the mind? "I should not judge as by his vacant expression."

The Reason.

"Why does a dog chase his tail?" "I suppose for economical reasons—to make both ends meet."

GOT HIS DIAMONDS THROUGH

Device Employed by Smuggler Completely Fooled the Customs Inspectors on Watch for Him.

There is a story told of a man whom the customs authorities were morally certain was smuggling, but they never had been able to catch him. The fact that he worked alone further charmed them. At last they got information from their European agents that the suspected person was buying large numbers of diamonds, and they were instructed to follow him day and night.

Unfortunately for them, the suspect was "tipped off" to the fact that he was being watched. So he wrote a letter to the New York collector, signing a fictitious name, in which he gave minute information against himself, describing just where the diamonds were to be found in a secret compartment of his trunk.

When he landed the trunk was at once seized, and, sure enough, the hidden stones were discovered. But when they were more closely examined it appeared that they were galls, so the suspect was permitted to depart.

On reaching home he posted off a large porous plaster from his back and the real stones were brought to light.

Ant Hills Start a Fire.

Perhaps the strangest of causes which ever produced a fire was an ant hill. There is a species of ant known as the wood ant which makes a nest entirely of vegetable matter. Under certain circumstances this may ferment until it gets hot enough to begin to smolder. Then comes a breeze which fans the spark into flame, and the result may be a serious forest fire.

Civics Explained.

Mrs. Proffiter, says "Dance-dance," in the Daily Express, was very proud of the stunts they were doing at the smart private school to which she had sent her daughter. "My dear," she said to her friend, "she's learning civics, if you please." "What's civics?" asked the friend. "Civics? My dear, don't you know? Why, it's the science of interfering in public affairs."

When Reading.

Has it ever occurred to you that, from the point of view of eyesight, there is a right way and a wrong way of holding a book? If you hold it the wrong way, especially if the pages be of smooth, shining paper, you will get a reflection harmful to the eyes. An eye specialist has been pointing this out, and he says the thing could be remedied by using a certain kind of bookmark which would destroy the reflection, and in that case you could hold the book anyhow you liked without coming to harm.

Sam's Dilemma.

Sam's friends were reasoning with him patiently at the street corner. "Now, Sam, it's time you went 'omo. That's the best place for you." "It's this way," argued the erring brother. "If I go 'ome now she'll say I'm drunk. If I don't go 'ome she'll say I'm drunk. It's this 'ere suffragette movement that's set 'em haranguing. I've a good mind to go 'ome and break the windows."—London Tit-Bits.

Something Worth Trying.

Anybody who has ever tried, for five minutes, a big motive, ever tried working a little happiness for other people into what he is doing for himself, for instance, if he stopped to think about it and how it worked and how happy it made him himself, would never do anything in any other way all his life. It is the big motives that are efficient.—Crowds.

What He Would Paint Next.

We went up to the Carlton building the other day to call on an artistic friend. We found him doing a war dance about his studio. "What on earth has happened?" we asked. "I've sold that painting," he cried. "Fine!" said we. "What are you going to paint next?" "The town!" And he did, you know.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Early Touch Law of Economy.

The law of economy enters into all the practical affairs of life, not only of the community at large, but also of the family and of the individual. It should be diligently taught to our children as one of the foundation principles of a good character.

To Remove Ink.

To extract ink from cotton, silk, or woolen goods, dip in spirits of turpentine and let remain for several hours. Then rub thoroughly between the hands and the spots will disappear without changing either the color or texture of the goods.

A Fellow Has To.

A good many bromidiots constantly urge young men to stand on their own feet. It has been our experience that when we began standing on anyone else's feet the fellow owning the other feet mentioned it to us almost immediately.

Spontaneous Advice.

"If you are looking for real comfort," advises a sensible young woman connected with a western newspaper, "buy your shoes large enough and be careful in the selection of your last-mate friends."

A Devil of a Fellow.

The sophomore was reading "Paradise Lost" (he had to) and, looking up, remarked: "This Lucifer was certainly stuck on himself." Here he says: "Myself am Hell!"

Charge Really Disproved.

"Isn't Deeds, the lawyer, a rather extravagant man?" "By no means. I've known him to make one out last for several years."—Boston Traveler.
